Eglantina Bardhi

THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear friends, partners and donors,

2025 has been a year of both challenges and meaningful achievements for Together for Life, reminding us of the importance of persistence, partnership and collaboration.

One of the most important milestones this year was the preparation of TFL's new Strategic Plan 2026–2030, which will guide our work over the next five years. This process was made possible with the financial support of the Embassy of Sweden in Tirana through the Core Support Programme.

Our work has contributed to improving access to services, promoting transparency and accountability and creating greater opportunities for citizens to be informed, engaged and heard. We have worked closely with women, young people and families, supporting them to access information, develop skills and strengthen their confidence to engage with institutions and influence decisions that affect their lives.

I would like to sincerely thank our partners, donors and the communities we work with for their trust, support and continued collaboration.

As we move forward guided by our new Strategic Plan, we remain committed to learning, improving and contributing meaningfully to a more transparent, inclusive and resilient Albanian society.

Kind regards,
Eglantina Bardhi

DESCRIPTION OF RESULTS

Strategic Goal 1 - Increase programmatic impact and service provision

- Strengthening partnerships and networks

During 2025, TFL expanded its collaboration with national and regional partners by becoming an active member of several professional and civil society networks aligned with its mission and priorities. These included Climate Bridges Network in Action, ALDA, GreenAL and EVBB. Through these networks, TFL strengthened cooperation with civil society organizations, research institutions and regional stakeholders, while gaining access to knowledge exchange opportunities, joint advocacy initiatives and new partnerships. TFL also strengthened cooperation with public institutions, including the Parliamentary Institute of Albania and the Minister of State for Public Administration and Anti-Corruption.

- Advancing evidence-based monitoring and policy influence

During 2025, eight monitoring, research and analytical reports were produced by TFL covering public financial management in healthcare, public procurement practices, corruption perceptions, institutional responses to corruption, informal payments, high-level corruption cases and women's economic empowerment. The quality and relevance of this work were recognized by public institutions. As a result of TFL's collaboration with the Parliamentary Institute, all monitoring reports produced during the year were officially included in the Parliamentary Library and made available to Members of Parliament. This represents an important step toward institutionalizing evidence-based civil society monitoring and ensuring that independent analyses contribute to parliamentary discussions and budget oversight processes.

- Improving service quality through evidence and advocacy

TFL continued monitoring home-based healthcare services for elderly individuals with limited mobility, generating evidence on service quality gaps and financing needs. The findings were consolidated into a technical brief and shared with the Ministry of Health and Social Protection, contributing to policy dialogue on improving service standards and ensuring more sustainable funding for community-based care services.

- Strengthening organizational effectiveness through digital innovation

TFL continued to improve its organizational efficiency by integrating digital tools and technologies into its daily operations. An important milestone was the introduction of Asana in June 2025 as the organization's project management platform. The system has improved coordination among staff, strengthened activity monitoring and enabled more structured and timely reporting across projects. Digital tools were also increasingly used to enhance communication, knowledge sharing and organizational learning.

Strategic Goal 2 - Communities have improved social determinants and healthy living

- Strengthening citizen participation, access to information and informed decision-making

During 2025 TFL worked to empowering citizens to actively participate in public life, engage with institutions and exercise their rights to information, accountability and democratic participation. In Pukē Municipality, citizens strengthened their understanding of local integrity mechanisms and their role in monitoring public authorities. The establishment of consultation groups and the participatory monitoring of the Municipality's 2024 Integrity Plan created more structured opportunities for citizen engagement and oversight. As a result, dialogue between citizens and local authorities became more constructive, while local institutions demonstrated greater openness to community feedback and accountability discussions.

Through the project “Tackling Health Misinformation and Deepfakes in the AI Era,” TFL is contributing to a better understanding of the growing impact of health misinformation and AI-generated content on citizens and public trust.

A research study is currently underway to generate evidence on citizens’ exposure to misinformation, levels of trust in different health information sources, and the influence of misleading content on health-related decisions and behaviours. The findings, which will be publicly presented in 2026, are expected to provide a valuable reference point for future interventions, policy discussions and awareness efforts aimed at strengthening resilience to misinformation and promoting informed decision-making.

- Public institutions accountable and transparent

During 2025, TFL contributed to strengthening accountability and transparency in the healthcare sector by generating evidence, enhancing citizen oversight and promoting more responsive institutional practices. Through the SPACE project, a transparent and competitive sub-granting process resulted in the selection of six local CSOs out of 28 applicants.

These organisations operate across different municipalities in Albania, including Fier, Kurbin, Mirditë and Elbasan, covering both urban and rural areas. Their interventions focused on improving transparency and accountability in key sectors such as education and healthcare, while promoting citizen participation and inclusion of vulnerable groups. As a result, local actors were better equipped to monitor public budgets and services, engage in decision-making processes, and advocate for improved service delivery. Particular progress was observed in the engagement of youth and persons with disabilities, whose participation strengthened representation and contributed to more inclusive and rights-based local governance. This was reflected in the direct engagement of 5592 individuals (3542 women and 2050 men), while an additional 31.961 individuals (22.600 women and 9361 men) were reached through outreach and communication efforts, contributing to increased awareness of citizen rights and stronger community participation.

These results were further reflected and validated during a national roundtable held on 24 October 2025, where stakeholders shared concrete outcomes from local interventions and discussed their contribution to strengthening transparency and accountability at the local level.

At the national level, TFL's evidence-based monitoring contributed to greater transparency and stronger public scrutiny of financial management and procurement practices in the healthcare sector. By identifying discrepancies, inefficiencies and risks in the use of public funds, this work enabled civil society, media and oversight actors to better assess institutional performance, increasing pressure for improved accountability. TFL's anti-corruption efforts further strengthened institutional responsiveness by exposing gaps in how corruption complaints are handled and promoting the use of the right to information as a tool for oversight. This contributed to improved transparency and encouraged more consistent institutional responses. At the same time, increased public awareness and engagement contributed to shifts in citizen attitudes and behaviours.

Citizens demonstrated improved understanding of corruption risks, including informal payments, and greater willingness to recognize and report such practices. Outreach efforts reaching over 10.000 citizens directly and more than 107.000 through digital campaigns strengthened public demand for transparency and accountability.

- Improving access to essential health and gender-based violence services

Through the EU-funded AGORA project, TFL contributed to improving access to healthcare and gender-based violence support services while promoting women's empowerment and awareness of their rights. A total of 347 beneficiaries (313 women and 34 men) were reached through activities aimed at strengthening access to support services and increasing awareness of sexual and reproductive health rights. Healthcare professionals significantly improved their ability to identify, manage and refer GBV cases through specialized training involving 193 participants, including doctors, nurses, psychologists and social workers. Women and girls demonstrated greater knowledge of available services and increased confidence to seek support, contributing to earlier identification of cases and more effective referral pathways.

The project also strengthened collaboration between healthcare providers and relevant institutions, supporting more coordinated and survivor-centred responses to gender-based violence.

- Influencing policies and strengthening rights-based approaches

TFL continued to promote policy and institutional changes that support equitable access to services and protect the rights of vulnerable groups. Through evidence-based advocacy on home-based healthcare services, TFL increased policymakers' awareness of the need for sustainable financing of community-based care. Advocacy efforts resulted in formal discussions within the Parliamentary Health Committee and engagement with the Ministry of Health and Social Protection and the Ministry of Finance. These developments contributed to increased recognition of financing gaps and generated commitments to further explore long-term policy and budgetary solutions.

At the regional level, TFL strengthened its capacity to promote equality, non-discrimination and rights-based approaches through its engagement in the VIOLET project, co-funded by the CERV-DAPHNE Programme and implemented in partnership with the Commissioner for Protection from Discrimination and organizations from Slovakia, Portugal, Lithuania, North Macedonia and the Czech Republic, the project fostered regional cooperation, knowledge exchange and the sharing of good practices.

Through this initiative, TFL enhanced its expertise in addressing sexual harassment and gender-based violence in the workplace while contributing to greater awareness among public institutions, employers and civil society actors. By encouraging coordinated action across organizational, institutional and legal levels, the project supported the development of safer, more inclusive and respectful working environments and reinforced efforts to protect workers' rights and promote equal opportunities.

• Promoting inclusive education and healthy lifestyles

TFL contributed to improving educational outcomes and healthy behaviours among children through health education programmes implemented in Elbasan, Berat, Korçë and Kukës. A total of 1381 pupils (714 girls and 667 boys) increased their knowledge of healthy lifestyles, nutrition, hygiene, physical activity and emotional well-being. Awareness of healthy nutrition reached 97%, while understanding of hygiene practices increased to 98%. Beyond knowledge gains, students demonstrated improved confidence, participation and social skills through learner-centred and participatory educational approaches.

• Strengthening family and community support systems for children

During 2025, the “Voice of Children” Centre started its operation in Mamurras, a community-based service providing integrated educational, psychosocial and child protection support for vulnerable children and their families. The Centre was created through the project “Safe Center – Supportive Services for Vulnerable Children in Mamurras,” implemented by Together for Life in partnership with the Municipality of Kurbin. The initiative was supported through sub-grants under the “EU for Social Care” programme, funded by the European Union and implemented by UNICEF Albania and World Vision Albania in cooperation with the Ministry of Health and Social Protection.

Through this intervention, vulnerable children gained access to safe spaces and tailored support services, while families received assistance aimed at strengthening child wellbeing, inclusion and protection within the community.

The Centre provided services for 163 beneficiaries, including 131 children and 32 parents. Through academic support, psychosocial services and recreational activities, children demonstrated improvements in learning outcomes, emotional well-being, social interaction and self-confidence. Continuous monitoring by centre staff, teachers and psychologists confirmed positive changes in children's behaviour, academic performance and social engagement. Parents participating in structured parenting sessions improved their knowledge of positive parenting practices, emotional support and child development, strengthening their ability to provide supportive home environments. At the community level, collaboration with municipal social services and multidisciplinary protection mechanisms contributed to improved identification, referral and management of child protection and domestic violence cases.

- Efficiency of policies and public funds for women and girls facing socio-economic challenges

Through evidence-based research, TFL generated new insights into the barriers limiting women's access to economic opportunities and public support schemes. The analysis identified persistent challenges, including a 12.2% gender employment gap, low participation of women in agricultural support programmes and limited access to public entrepreneurship funds. The findings highlighted structural obstacles within existing funding mechanisms and underscored the need for more inclusive and gender-responsive approaches. The evidence generated through the study stimulated dialogue among public institutions, civil society organizations, academia and community representatives on how public resources can better address the needs of women and girls facing socio-economic challenges. Consultative discussions held in Kukës, Elbasan and Tirana helped validate the findings of the report, identify priority barriers and strengthen stakeholder engagement around policy improvements.

As a result, there was increased recognition among institutions and stakeholders of the importance of aligning strategic planning and public financing with gender equality objectives. Discussions emphasized the need for more targeted investments in employment, education and social protection, as well as greater transparency and accountability in the allocation of public funds. The initiative contributed to strengthening evidence-based advocacy on women's economic empowerment and created a stronger foundation for future policy reforms aimed at improving access to economic opportunities and public support mechanisms for women and girls.

Strategic Goal 3 - Communities have increased economic and social opportunities

TFL contributed to strengthening economic resilience, employability and social inclusion by expanding access to skills development opportunities, entrepreneurship support and sustainable livelihood initiatives. Through a combination of professional training, digital innovation, non-formal education and environmentally sustainable income-generating activities, TFL supported young people, women and marginalized groups to enhance their capacities and access new economic opportunities.

- Expanding economic opportunities for young people

TFL supported young people in Kurbin Municipality to strengthen their entrepreneurial, digital and financial competences, enabling them to better respond to emerging labour market opportunities and engage in the digital economy. Through targeted training and mentoring, 30 young people (20 girls and 10 boys) improved their ability to develop business ideas, apply digital tools and translate innovative concepts into practical e-business initiatives.

Partnerships with local stakeholders and the Albanian E-Commerce Association further increased participants' exposure to market opportunities and entrepreneurship pathways. As a result, young people demonstrated greater confidence, motivation and readiness to pursue employment and self-employment opportunities, contributing to the development of locally driven economic initiatives, particularly among young women.

- Strengthening skills and employability of marginalized youth and women

Through a series of Erasmus+ initiatives, TFL strengthened the skills, confidence and employability of marginalized youth and women by promoting digital innovation, active participation and inclusive learning opportunities. The DEMPOD project enhanced participants' digital communication and storytelling capacities, enabling young people to access new opportunities in the digital economy. A total of 100 young people (65 girls and 35 boys), including 20 participants from Albania, developed practical competences in podcasting and digital content creation, resulting in the production of 100 podcasts. These activities strengthened digital literacy, creativity and communication skills while increasing young people's engagement in issues affecting their communities.

The MYndTheater project contributed to creating more supportive conditions for youth participation and development by strengthening the capacities of youth workers and practitioners. A total of 42 youth workers improved their ability to apply innovative and participatory methodologies, while more than 210 young people increased their awareness and resilience regarding mental health challenges and digital risks.

Through the VEBY project, youth workers and educators enhanced their competencies in virtual facilitation and non-formal education methodologies. Twenty-seven participants strengthened their ability to design and implement virtual exchanges, while young people improved critical thinking, intercultural communication and collaboration skills that are increasingly important for education, employment and participation in digital and international environments.

As part of the Digi-Learn project, TFL hosted a three-day Train-the-Trainer event in Tirana, bringing together 20 adult educators from Albania, France, Spain and Italy. The training strengthened participants' capacities to support senior learners in developing digital competences and engaging confidently in an increasingly digital world. Through interactive learning sessions and peer exchange, participants enhanced their knowledge of learner motivation, growth mindset development, media and information literacy, and effective approaches to adult education. The training also introduced the Digi-Learn e-learning platform and supported educators in designing pilot initiatives to transfer the acquired knowledge to older learners in their respective communities.

- Promoting sustainable livelihoods and women's economic empowerment

TFL supported women and girls from marginalized communities in Kukës, Kurbin and Gramsh to develop sustainable livelihoods through environmentally friendly income-generating activities. By promoting circular economy approaches, including textile recycling and handicraft production, the initiative strengthened both economic resilience and environmental awareness.

A total of 42 women and girls improved their practical skills and knowledge related to sustainable production and entrepreneurship. Evaluation results increased from 54% before training to 95% after training, demonstrating substantial improvements in participants' capacities to develop marketable products and manage income-generating activities.

Access to tools, mentoring and market opportunities enabled participants to apply their newly acquired skills and continue production independently. The “N’Fill Fair”, organized in December 2025, provided direct market access and visibility for participants. Products created by 40 women and girls were exhibited, attracting more than 150 visitors and generating direct sales. Additional mentoring support helped participants improve product promotion, pricing strategies and market outreach.

The publication of individual business profiles on the Women in Business platform further expanded participants' visibility and access to potential customers, contributing to stronger economic opportunities and increased financial independence.

Strategic Goal 4 - Communities have increased resilience to respond to emergency situations

- Strengthening local preparedness and institutional capacity

TFL supported local authorities and service providers to improve their preparedness and response capacities in line with national and European civil protection standards. In Gramsh Municipality, local capacities for emergency and disaster preparedness were strengthened through evidence-based planning approaches and improved alignment with civil protection frameworks.

In the framework of the project SOLIDAR - Together in health emergencies TFL promoted more responsive and accountable local systems by strengthening feedback and complaint mechanisms within primary healthcare services. The development of a practical manual on responding to citizens' complaints and requests provided healthcare staff and local actors with tools to establish structured feedback systems, contributing to more responsive health services and stronger community trust. These efforts contributed to increased institutional awareness of community needs and strengthened local capacities to address emergency preparedness, service accessibility and risk reduction challenges.

- Empowering communities and women to participate in risk management

A major achievement for the work done under SOLIDAR project was the consolidation of Community Resilience Networks (CRNs) in five municipalities: Pukë, Dajç-Shkodër, Fushë-Krujë, Gramsh and Përmet. These networks strengthened the role of communities as active contributors to local preparedness and resilience efforts. The CRNs brought together 84 members (61 women and 23 men), with women playing a leading role in identifying risks, advocating for community needs and engaging with local authorities. Through structured dialogue and evidence-based advocacy, network members raised and followed up on at least five priority issues related to community safety and access to services. The formal recognition of CRNs through cooperation agreements with four municipalities further strengthened their legitimacy and sustainability, ensuring that community perspectives particularly those of women are increasingly integrated into local planning and decision-making processes.

These achievements demonstrate a shift from community consultation toward active community participation in emergency preparedness and risk reduction.

Good Practice - Local advocacy in action

CRN groups demonstrated effective local-level advocacy by engaging directly with local institutions and communities to address safety and preparedness gaps.

In Gramsh	CRN members held a dedicated meeting with the mayor to raise community concerns and propose solutions.
In Fushë-Krujë	members gathered evidence from local schools and submitted a formal request to equip them with fire extinguishers.
In Përmet	the CRN combined institutional advocacy with community outreach, submitting requests to improve laboratory services while also raising awareness in rural schools on emergency response and first aid.

• Engaging youth and schools in building a culture of preparedness

TFL strengthened youth participation in disaster risk reduction through the Fire Free project, implemented in Gramsh Municipality. A total of 21 young people (12 girls and 9 boys) were trained as peer educators on fire prevention, risk awareness and emergency preparedness.

These young people subsequently organized awareness activities in schools and communities, extending knowledge and preparedness measures to a wider audience. Educational manuals and awareness materials supported both formal and non-formal learning processes, helping students develop practical knowledge on risk prevention and emergency response.

The effectiveness of this approach became particularly visible during the large-scale wildfire that affected Gramsh in August 2025, when trained young people and community members actively participated as volunteers supporting local response efforts. Their engagement demonstrated increased preparedness, community ownership and the value of investing in youth as agents of resilience.

- Increasing community awareness and participation in emergency preparedness

Community education and awareness remained central components of TFL's resilience-building efforts. Through a combination of direct engagement and digital outreach, TFL significantly expanded access to information on preparedness, risk reduction and emergency response. A total of 757 individuals (511 women and 246 men) participated directly in awareness-raising and capacity-building activities related to emergency preparedness and response. In parallel, digital communication campaigns reached 56.384 individuals, contributing to broader public awareness of emergency risks and preparedness measures. Participants consistently highlighted the importance of these initiatives, noting that opportunities to discuss emergency preparedness and disaster risk reduction remain limited in their communities. Additional outreach activities implemented through the Fire Free project reached more than 127 community members in high-risk rural areas. These interventions improved knowledge of wildfire prevention, safer land management practices and community-based risk reduction measures. Women and young people represented a significant proportion of participants, contributing to more inclusive preparedness efforts.

- Promoting inclusive and responsive health and social protection systems

TFL continued to strengthen the role of civil society and patient organizations in advocating for equitable access to services during emergencies and beyond. Two advocacy initiatives developed with patient organizations addressed barriers affecting vulnerable groups. One initiative promoted access to primary healthcare services for persons with disabilities in Librazhd, while another advocated for the inclusion of physiotherapy services for people living with multiple sclerosis within primary healthcare services. These efforts generated tangible results. The Ministry of Health and Social Protection initiated consideration of free physiotherapy services for people with multiple sclerosis, while advocacy regarding healthcare accessibility for persons with disabilities in Librazhd advanced through coordinated engagement with local and national authorities. By strengthening advocacy capacities, improving accountability mechanisms and increasing institutional responsiveness, TFL contributed to more inclusive systems capable of addressing the needs of vulnerable populations during both routine and emergency situations.

TFL'S NEW STRATEGIC PLAN 2026 - 2030

The development of Together for Life's Strategic Plan 2026–2030 marked an important organizational milestone during 2025 and was made possible through the support of the Embassy of Sweden in Tirana under the Core Support Programme. The strategy was developed through an evidence-based and participatory process that combined internal reflection, stakeholder consultations and an independent organizational assessment. Building on the experience gained from implementing the 2022–2025 Strategy, the process examined organizational achievements, identified areas for improvement and assessed emerging trends affecting the health, governance, social inclusion and community resilience sectors.

The strategic review provided a clearer understanding of TFL's strengths, capacities and future opportunities, helping the organization define priorities that respond to both community needs and the evolving development context in Albania. It also fostered strong staff engagement, creating a shared vision for the next phase of the organization's development and reinforcing ownership of its strategic direction.

A key outcome of the process was the development of an updated strategic and monitoring framework that strengthens results-based management, organizational learning and evidence-informed decision-making.

LESSONS LEARNED 2025

Key insights shaping stronger communities, institutions and future impact

CIVIL SOCIETY MATTERS FOR EU INTEGRATION

Strong and independent civil society organizations play a critical role in advancing transparency, accountability and citizen participation in Albania's reform process.

2025 CONFIRMED THAT:

Empowered communities create sustainable change.

Evidence strengthens advocacy.

Partnerships increase impact.

Citizen participation drives accountability.

Strong civil society supports democratic development.

WESTERN BALKANS R&I YOUTH AWARDS

The Fashionation project, implemented by Together for Life, has been awarded as one of the most successful youth-driven innovation initiatives in the Western Balkans! This recognition was awarded through the Western Balkans R&I Youth Awards, under the POLICY ANSWERS call, funded by the European Union as part of the Horizon programme.

Fashionation aimed to empower young people passionate about fashion by developing their skills and improving their employability. The project bridged local cultural heritage with modern fashion design, and was implemented across five Balkan countries: Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Montenegro, Greece, and Serbia. It celebrated shared traditions as a driver of creativity and innovation.

The Western Balkans R&I Youth Awards recognize outstanding youth-focused initiatives that have actively engaged young people in research and innovation between 2020 and 2024. These awards aim to highlight success stories from the region, inspire future careers in R&I, and promote opportunities for professional development and skill-building.

MEDIA PRESENCE AND ENGAGEMENT

During 2025, Together For Life (TFL) continued to actively engage with its audience through its main digital platforms, with Facebook serving as the primary channel for content distribution and interaction. Between January 1 and December 31, 2025, Facebook posts generated 611,392 views and 30,274 engagements. By the end of the year, the page had reached a total of 8,180 followers, including 221 new followers gained during the year.

Instagram also remained an important communication channel, with 147 posts published throughout the year and a total of 1,819 followers.

The TFL website served as a key information hub, hosting the organization's reports, studies, analyses, and updates on its activities.

TFL was also present in audiovisual media, including Top Channel, RTSH, Ora News, Report TV, A2 CNN, and others, where key issues in the healthcare sector were discussed, including low levels of funding and the importance of transparency and accountability.

TFL also participated in hearings at the Parliamentary Committee on Health, where the draft budget of the Ministry of Health and Social Protection for 2026 was discussed.

The presence on digital platforms has played an important role in raising awareness, disseminating reliable information, and fostering continuous communication with the community and key stakeholders.
